La Caravelle for lunch

Sit back, relax and enjoy the complimentary tapas as amuse-bouche at this one of a kind brasserie. La Caravelle is located on the first floor of l'Hôtel Bellevue and is absolutely gorgeous. Adding to its charm is the balcony seating which dramatically enhances the ambience of this already incredible restaurant.

Lunchtime is the perfect time to arrive and enjoy an ample choice of anchoïade, daube Provençale and aioli. An evening at this fine establishment is delightful as guests can enjoy their meals while listening to live jazz performances that are such an intricate part of the Caravelle experience.

Déjeuner en Ville for dinner

Rustic decor, family atmosphere can set this little place hidden in the small streets of Marseille . Once inside this small restaurant , the surprise is in the plate: red mullet sauce , beef tongue , veal Axoa in Espelette, péquillos stuffed with cod brandade ... and also Provençal, Corsican and south west specialties. The mixture is very successful and bystanders rushed inside of this famous piece of gastronomy.

Vinoneo for lunch

Renaud Pierlot was a wine-maker for 17 years near the Mont Sainte Victoire. After selling his vineyard, he decided to open a restaurant where the food was excellent but the wine- paired by the glass with each dish- was the star.

Vinonéo is the very happy result. It nestles on a quiet, pretty, south-facing square at the foot of Marseille's Old Town or Panier, right between the historic Accoules Church and the Hôtel Dieu and opposite the Daviel Pavillion. It's slightly set back from the harbour though from certain tables you do have a glimpse of the Old Port.
